

Photographs of the day

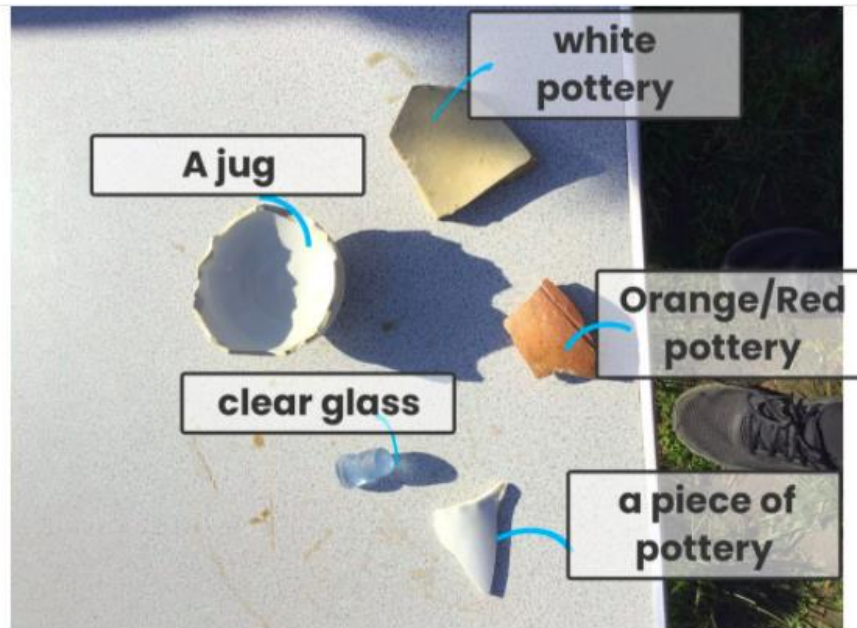

Today we were a part of an archaeologist project with the school. We were cleaning ancient artefacts from hundreds of years ago. In the pictures, we can see how dirty it was and now how we clean we made it. We used tools like toothbrush and paint brushes. The toothbrushes we used to polish the dirt off and the paintbrushes we used to clean of the dust. We think that these are broken pieces of pottery as they are in the shape of pottery. I thought it was a bottle. It could have been for storing food or water and it was as tall as a ruler. The colour looked like a bright brown on the right side and the left side was dark brown.

It is a blackening bottle. It was made for cleaning boots and making them shiny. It was formed on a pottery wheel. It is also made up from dried clay.

Me my partner (Leticia, Iwo) think that the clear glass is a bottle stopper because it is small and is dented at the sphere. We think that the orange/red piece of material is pottery because it has a line going through the top. We think the white piece of material is pottery as well because it is curved and also it's thick.
